

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Personal computers send the IDs of viewed tiles constituting screens viewed by the users to a content server through a packet communication network. The content server replaces specific tiles among the tiles constituting the screen of an image sent from a digital video camera with tiles in another image, and sends the resultant image data to the personal computers through the packet communication network.